This invention relates to hydrocarbon conversion and, more particularly, to the production of cycloaliphatic hydrocarbons by the conversion of an olefinically unsaturated reactant, such as isobutylene, in the presence of a ZSM-5 type zeolite catalyst. U.S. Pat. No. 4,503,023 to Karol et al describes the conversion of a gaseous olefin such as isobutylene to primarily trimethyl- and trisopropylbenzenes in the presence of silicalite type ZSM-5 catalyst to produce a product having an initial boiling point of at least 100.degree. C, and preferably at least 100.degree. C, and a final boiling point of at least 400.degree. C, for the product. The isobutylene is mixed with a gaseous olefin such as propylene and then contacted with the zeolite catalyst at a temperature in the range of about 100.degree. C, to about 400.degree.
