Q: How can I make these SVG icons larger? This is a question about d3.js. I currently have a set of 3 SVGs that repeat. Each of these SVGs is a square (60px by 60px). They are displayed in a row. I'd like to make them larger, and it's not working. `.rect { stroke-width: 30px; } .rect { stroke-width: 30px; stroke-dasharray: 600; fill: #d3d3d3; } .rect:hover { stroke-dashoffset: 0; transition-duration: 1s, 1s; transition-timing-function: linear; transition-delay: 0s; transition-property: stroke-dashoffset, stroke-dasharray; }` How do I make the SVG larger (or how do I make the d3.js code work)? Here is a link to my jsfiddle. A: Your code makes a lot of sense and will achieve what you want. I assume you wanted to enlarge the size of the rectangles. The only thing you are missing is specifying the width and height of the rectangles. If you wanted to make these larger you will need to specify a different width and height for each of the rectangles. For example: `.rect { width: 250px; height: 180px; stroke-width: 30px; }` If you wanted to make them larger, you would need to make the width and height greater. If you don't want the lines to cut across the rectangles, you need to specify the shape-outside property. For example: `.rect { shape-outside: circle(70px at 50% 50%); }` Then, when the `:hover` selector is active the circles would still be in the correct location, they would just be much larger. Here is an updated fiddle Q: What are the biggest (relatively) "ordinary" usage questions? So, I was curious as to what questions have been asked using the "Ask Question" tool here on Stack Overflow. A: As funny as the list of challenges

Athlete Awareness Week – focus on mental health We are all aware that various mental health conditions and illnesses affect sportspeople. Over a third of people with psychological health problems are estimated to have participated in sport or physical activity. That's why the Mental Health Foundation Scotland (MHF), in partnership with Sport England, is organising a week of events for those in sport. The aim is to raise awareness of the range of mental health conditions and illnesses, and the support available in sport. The plan is for events and work to take place across the UK. Athletes can be involved by talking to people in sport about mental health, and vice versa. It is hoped that more people will come forward to talk about mental health issues. And what better place than the National Swimming Centre in Bathpool, where the members of the winning team at the 2016 Commonwealth Games have come to talk to young swimmers about confidence, nerves and the pressures that they face in training and competition. It's a year to the Games. The Scottish Commonwealth and Olympic Council (SCOC) is working closely with the MHF to highlight the importance of champion mental health. The two-day Athlete Awareness Week will be held in the capital from June 27 to 28. How to get involved The week's events will take place from June 27 to 28./* * SRCFile: AbstractDomain.java.v S * * Copyright (c) 2005-2010, Richard Cornwell & Richard G.
