The phrase "Photoshop tool" or "Photoshop commands" in a document means you are using a tool or feature in Photoshop. To turn it off and back on, you can use the Typo keystroke, which on a Mac turns on and off the text tool. It does the same thing for object tools and other features. Tools are grouped together into a workspace, which is a container for the tools used to manipulate an image. The workspace offers a way for you to work and get organized. The actual document mode determines the elements that are available to you to manipulate the image. You can create any tool you like in any document mode, but some programs' default options are better than others. In general, if you plan to edit RAW or JPEG images, you should use the RAW or JPEG document options. If you plan to work with a standard type of image such as BMP, TIFF, JPEG, or GIF, try the Standard document mode. When you use a grid to position the tools relative to the image, place the grid somewhere you can see it. If you place it on the workspace bar, for example, you can see it from any workspace. If you place the grid on the image, you need to scroll around to see it. The Photoshop workspace bar (see the margin) has some pre-created tools such as Zoom, Eraser, Eyedropper, the Move tool (which you can see in Figure 4-1), and other tools. You can add other tools to the workspace bar, and those tools can also be added to different workspaces. **Figure 4-1:** To create a tool in Photoshop, just click its icon on the Workspace bar. You can also create your own custom tool that works with a single document by clicking the Toolbox tool and then clicking the icon of the tool you want. When you create a tool, the tool appears in the Toolbox area. After you create and insert a custom tool, you can add it to the workspace bar. To access the Toolbox, select it from the Window menu or press the Ctrl+T keyboard shortcut. The Toolbox is a pane on the right side of the Photoshop screen that appears when you select the Window menu. You can drag tools from the Toolbox to a particular workspace and use the tool assigned to that workspace in the image you're working on. The tools in the Toolbox have a shortcut menu that includes tools for

The Best First Antidote to Imposter Syndrome Imposter syndrome is the common feeling of insecurity, shame, and doubt that we've accomplished less than we actually have. Believing we are fakers, inventors, con artists, or fakes in general means that we will never stand for greatness. But let's be clear: we are not the first people to feel this way. Instead, we are not the first people to have lived in a culture that promotes and glorifies the rise of the egotist. As we can all see, these memes are everywhere and they shout to us, "Perfection is a lie." To learn more about how we can handle this guilt and feel more comfortable with our imperfect, shoddy, or terrible success, read on. What Is Imposter Syndrome? Imposter Syndrome is the feeling of "I'm a fake, I'm terrible at what I do, I'm inferior," or some version of these thoughts. Basically, this is when we feel like a fraud, inept, or less than good at something, even if that thing is just being who we are. Reasons for this feeling include, but are not limited to: our self-worth is dependent on others, we have a history of failure, or we have been told or believed we're not good enough. A person suffering from Imposter Syndrome will have so many insecurities they may even be afraid of who they are and what they look like. Q: How to use SQLiteOpenHelper get from an ArrayList I would like to know how to use an ArrayList as a source of an SQLiteOpenHelper. I have an ArrayList of objects that I would like to translate into SQLiteOpenHelper. The problem is that I have objects in the arrayList that have different ways of communicating with a server. These objects are polymorphic. And therefore I would like to see how they get the data from a single type of a server, this way I can mix the information from different types of a server and save it in a single database. This is the arrayList: final ArrayList listaPersonas = new ArrayList(); The objects that populate this list are: @Override public void onResponse(String response) { try{ JSONObject jsonObj = new JSONObject(response); boolean error = jsonObj.getBoolean("error"); if(error) { //prueba de la respuesta de la peticion JSONObject errorJson = jsonObj.getJSONObject("error_codes"); mAuth.errorCodes = errorJson.getInt("code"); } else{ StringBuilder sb = new StringBuilder(); JSONArray jsonArray = jsonObj.getJSONArray("nombres_de_personas"); for(int i=0; i
